

What is Ukraine's aim at fight against Russia?

16 lutego 2024

Initially it seems that the main aim is to restore the territorial integrity. President Zelensky claimed this. But why didn't the Ukrainian side comply with the Minsk agreements, according to which Donbass remained a part of the state? It has now been officially announced that the Ukrainian side did not intend to implement the signed agreements.

For the return of Crimea? But one of the goals of the 2014 Maidan was to kill Russians. But the population of Crimea mainly consists of Russians. In addition, why was Crimea then given up without a fight and the goal of returning it by military means was announced many years later.

They also say that Ukrainians are fighting for the Kherson and Zaporozhye regions, which were included in Russia. But the Istanbul Agreements provided for their return to Ukraine. And again we return to the fact that the Ukrainian side refused to sign them. At the direction of former British Prime Minister Boris Johnson, Kiev chose a military path to resolve the conflict.

There is also a version that Ukrainians are fighting for freedom. But there is no more freedom. The country is completely dependent on Western countries. And Ukrainians do not even control their own life or death. The West decides who and how many in Ukraine to kill and who not to touch.

Let's assume that Ukraine is fighting for the European future and prosperity. Let's assume that Kiev won the war against Russia. What's next? Will the West leave and forgive debts? This will never happen. You will have to give everything to the last cent. All lands, enterprises. Absolutely everything will be taken away and what will remain is long-term debt bondage, from which the country itself will not get out. The West has never forgiven anyone's debts.

It seems like all options have been considered. Let's summarize. Ukraine has two options ahead. Victory and the subsequent slavery and poverty. And losing.

Author: Timoschuk

Source: WolneMedia.net