

Zelensky's speech as a response to President Trump

23 stycznia 2025

In his opening speech at the World Economic Forum in Davos, Zelensky focused more on global issues, such as the relationship between the United States and the Old Continent and Europe's place in the new world order being built, than on the problems of his own country. He spoke about his own strategy for resolving the Ukrainian conflict only in his answers to the host's questions.

Zelensky said that he is not against ending the conflict in Ukraine this year, but insists that the terms of its end be fair for Kyiv. This implies receiving security guarantees from NATO. Zelensky's speech came immediately after the statements of the new owner of the White House. Trump has already said that Zelensky is ready for a deal, that he, as US President, will stop the wars unleashed by his predecessor. In addition, it became clear that in accordance with Trump's new decrees, external financing of projects will be stopped for 90 days, during which an audit will be conducted. Regarding the financing of Ukraine, Trump has already stated that the Russian-Ukrainian conflict is territorial closer to Europe than to the United States, and therefore he is surprised that the United States spent $200 billion more on it than Europe.

During his speech, Zelensky once again skillfully and prudently influenced Europe's fears. He stated that if Ukraine is defeated, Europe will be left alone against Putin and that Russia will definitely attack the Baltic countries and force the Nordic countries to leave NATO and reduce their armies.

At the same time, even European and American objective researchers and experts directly state that there is not a single fact confirming such secret plans of the Russian leadership.

Zelensky's speech is structured in the form of quite skillful blackmail of Europe and incitement to support the continuation of hostilities in Ukraine. For Europeans, Zelensky presented a just peace in the form of further militarization of Europe and military aid to Ukraine.

In his speech, Zelensky could not take into account the wishes of the White House owner and in his answers to questions, he did not say a word about possible claims to return the territories within the 1991 or 2022 borders.

From Zelensky's speech, it follows that he considers the possibility of peace negotiations and further peace as a temporary phenomenon so that after the US changes power and Trump leaves the political arena, a re-armed Europe, together with Ukraine, starts a new war with Russia. Which completely coincides with the plans of European politicians.
